

Part 3: Adding a book to the blog

1. Check the posts to see if your book is already on the blog. If so, move to part 4 of the how-to.
2. If book is not on the blog, select the compose tab.

3. Include all of the following information in your blog post.

Compose New Post: What Are You Reading?

The screenshot shows the 'Compose New Post' form. At the top, there are two input fields: 'Title' and 'Category'. The 'Title' field contains the text 'The City of Ember' and the 'Category' field is a dropdown menu with 'Fantasy' selected. Below these fields, there are two buttons: 'Compose Post' and 'Edit HTML'. Below the buttons, there is a text area for the post body. The text area contains the following text: 'Author: Jeanne DuPrau', 'Genre: Fantasy', 'ISBN: 10-0375822747', and 'This novel tells the story of two teens who go against the norms of their city, discover that something is wrong, and risk everything to save the people they love. It is the first in a trilogy.' Below the text area, there are three sections: 'Posting Status' with a dropdown menu set to 'Draft', 'Comments' with a dropdown menu set to 'Open', and 'Accept TrackBacks' with a checked checkbox. Below these sections, there is a text input field for 'Send a TrackBack to these addresses' and a link 'View Previously Sent TrackBacks'. At the bottom of the form, there are two buttons: 'Preview' and 'Save'. Annotations with arrows point to various parts of the form: 'AUTHOR' points to the 'Author' text in the post body; 'TITLE' points to the 'Title' input field; 'GENRE' points to the 'Genre' text in the post body; 'ISBN' points to the 'ISBN' text in the post body; 'BRIEF SUMMARY' points to the main text of the post body; and an arrow points from the 'Save' button to a text box at the bottom of the page.
